

EVE GOES FREE

Adam Must Continue to Suffer for Transgression.

Frank Schneck Will Pay Penalty of Crime Alone.

PITY FOR MOLLIE STEWART

But Her Companion Is Only a Trusty at the Pen.

No Wave of Sympathy Washes His Sands of Time.

(Frank Schneck's version of famous Wilcox poem.)

"The man repented and turned from his sin
"But no door opened to let him in
"The governor prayed he might be forgiven
"But told him to look for mercy—in prison
"For this is the law of earth, I know,
"The man is stoned while the woman may go."

Frank Schneck, convicted of the murder of his wife and two children, must continue to suffer as a prisoner at the Lansing state prison. Mollie Stewart, his accomplice, is today a free woman.

At the state house there is not an official or an employee who has the slightest thought that Schneck will leave the prison—at least under the present administration. The board of corrections has not smiled on Schneck's applications for a parole and the governor's office is not in the least disposed to take an interest in the case of the Franklin county wife and child murderer.

A few days ago, however, Governor Capper sent for the two daughters of Mollie Stewart and handed them a parole for their mother. Mollie Stewart had been the subject upon whom a wave of sentiment and sympathy had been centered. Her needs were met for her more than usual attention.

She was the only woman "hang" prisoner in the state penitentiary. A chain of solid circumstances had been linked about her. A jury said she should spend her life behind prison walls or hang at the pleasure of the governor.

Verdict in Four Minutes.

The same testimony that sent Frank Schneck to prison was used in convicting Mollie Stewart. It required just four minutes for a jury to decide the case. Even the testimony of Mollie Stewart's husband, offered in a separate trial of Schneck, dropped into the state's case against the Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Witnesses who saw Schneck and the Stewart woman in each other's company. Other witnesses swore that they saw Schneck and Mrs. Stewart driving toward the Schneck home the night of the triple killing. The Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Witnesses who saw Schneck and the Stewart woman in each other's company. Other witnesses swore that they saw Schneck and Mrs. Stewart driving toward the Schneck home the night of the triple killing. The Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Outside the prison walls, however, there is no wave of sympathy for Frank Schneck. He is just a trusty at the prison. He may serve the remainder of his days behind prison walls and no one is going to show much concern. That is the reason, perhaps, that Schneck is convinced the man is stoned, while the woman may go.

MANSION HELD UP.

(Continued from Page One.)

stood face to face with a masked robber. His companion in the meantime, had overpowered three maids. "I tried to shut the door," Mrs. Armour said today, "but the man thrust his foot into the opening and through this pressed a revolver into my face."

"I grasped the barrel of the weapon and thrust it over my head. I then shut the door, but he hurled himself against the door and opened it."

"I called for help, but only three servants were confronted with a revolver held by the second robber and forced into the room with me."

"One of the robbers asked where I had been, and I replied to my Lake Forest home."

"Bring all your diamonds," he asked.

"No, I left most of my jewels up there."

"I'll knock your teeth down your throat if you don't tell me where the stuff is," he commanded.

Woman Threatened With Death.

While Mrs. Armour and her maids were held in a corner of the room, with the threat of death to any who moved, one of the robbers swept the dresser of jewels; then all rooms were searched.

Completing their work, the men ran downstairs and escaped through a back door. Telephone wires had been cut to prevent alarm.

Although provided with good descriptions of the robbers, detectives had made no arrests early today.

Corps of Guards Eluded.

The Armour residence occupies half a block and is guarded by a high fence, spiked at the top. There were several male servants, housemen, chauffeurs and even a light watch-

GO AFTER "CLUBS"

Attorney General Will Investigate Organizations in Kansas.

Suspicion That They Are Providing Liquor for Members.

LIVE STOCK JUDGES.

Leading Experts in Lines Selected for Topeka Fair.

No Wave of Sympathy Washes His Sands of Time.

(Frank Schneck's version of famous Wilcox poem.)

"The man repented and turned from his sin
"But no door opened to let him in
"The governor prayed he might be forgiven
"But told him to look for mercy—in prison
"For this is the law of earth, I know,
"The man is stoned while the woman may go."

Frank Schneck, convicted of the murder of his wife and two children, must continue to suffer as a prisoner at the Lansing state prison. Mollie Stewart, his accomplice, is today a free woman.

At the state house there is not an official or an employee who has the slightest thought that Schneck will leave the prison—at least under the present administration. The board of corrections has not smiled on Schneck's applications for a parole and the governor's office is not in the least disposed to take an interest in the case of the Franklin county wife and child murderer.

A few days ago, however, Governor Capper sent for the two daughters of Mollie Stewart and handed them a parole for their mother. Mollie Stewart had been the subject upon whom a wave of sentiment and sympathy had been centered. Her needs were met for her more than usual attention.

She was the only woman "hang" prisoner in the state penitentiary. A chain of solid circumstances had been linked about her. A jury said she should spend her life behind prison walls or hang at the pleasure of the governor.

Verdict in Four Minutes.

The same testimony that sent Frank Schneck to prison was used in convicting Mollie Stewart. It required just four minutes for a jury to decide the case. Even the testimony of Mollie Stewart's husband, offered in a separate trial of Schneck, dropped into the state's case against the Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Witnesses who saw Schneck and the Stewart woman in each other's company. Other witnesses swore that they saw Schneck and Mrs. Stewart driving toward the Schneck home the night of the triple killing. The Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Witnesses who saw Schneck and the Stewart woman in each other's company. Other witnesses swore that they saw Schneck and Mrs. Stewart driving toward the Schneck home the night of the triple killing. The Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

MANSION HELD UP.

(Continued from Page One.)

stood face to face with a masked robber. His companion in the meantime, had overpowered three maids. "I tried to shut the door," Mrs. Armour said today, "but the man thrust his foot into the opening and through this pressed a revolver into my face."

"I grasped the barrel of the weapon and thrust it over my head. I then shut the door, but he hurled himself against the door and opened it."

"I called for help, but only three servants were confronted with a revolver held by the second robber and forced into the room with me."

"One of the robbers asked where I had been, and I replied to my Lake Forest home."

"Bring all your diamonds," he asked.

"No, I left most of my jewels up there."

"I'll knock your teeth down your throat if you don't tell me where the stuff is," he commanded.

Woman Threatened With Death.

While Mrs. Armour and her maids were held in a corner of the room, with the threat of death to any who moved, one of the robbers swept the dresser of jewels; then all rooms were searched.

Completing their work, the men ran downstairs and escaped through a back door. Telephone wires had been cut to prevent alarm.

Although provided with good descriptions of the robbers, detectives had made no arrests early today.

Corps of Guards Eluded.

The Armour residence occupies half a block and is guarded by a high fence, spiked at the top. There were several male servants, housemen, chauffeurs and even a light watch-

GO AFTER "CLUBS"

Attorney General Will Investigate Organizations in Kansas.

Suspicion That They Are Providing Liquor for Members.

LIVE STOCK JUDGES.

Leading Experts in Lines Selected for Topeka Fair.

No Wave of Sympathy Washes His Sands of Time.

(Frank Schneck's version of famous Wilcox poem.)

"The man repented and turned from his sin
"But no door opened to let him in
"The governor prayed he might be forgiven
"But told him to look for mercy—in prison
"For this is the law of earth, I know,
"The man is stoned while the woman may go."

Frank Schneck, convicted of the murder of his wife and two children, must continue to suffer as a prisoner at the Lansing state prison. Mollie Stewart, his accomplice, is today a free woman.

At the state house there is not an official or an employee who has the slightest thought that Schneck will leave the prison—at least under the present administration. The board of corrections has not smiled on Schneck's applications for a parole and the governor's office is not in the least disposed to take an interest in the case of the Franklin county wife and child murderer.

A few days ago, however, Governor Capper sent for the two daughters of Mollie Stewart and handed them a parole for their mother. Mollie Stewart had been the subject upon whom a wave of sentiment and sympathy had been centered. Her needs were met for her more than usual attention.

She was the only woman "hang" prisoner in the state penitentiary. A chain of solid circumstances had been linked about her. A jury said she should spend her life behind prison walls or hang at the pleasure of the governor.

Verdict in Four Minutes.

The same testimony that sent Frank Schneck to prison was used in convicting Mollie Stewart. It required just four minutes for a jury to decide the case. Even the testimony of Mollie Stewart's husband, offered in a separate trial of Schneck, dropped into the state's case against the Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Witnesses who saw Schneck and the Stewart woman in each other's company. Other witnesses swore that they saw Schneck and Mrs. Stewart driving toward the Schneck home the night of the triple killing. The Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Witnesses who saw Schneck and the Stewart woman in each other's company. Other witnesses swore that they saw Schneck and Mrs. Stewart driving toward the Schneck home the night of the triple killing. The Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

MANSION HELD UP.

(Continued from Page One.)

stood face to face with a masked robber. His companion in the meantime, had overpowered three maids. "I tried to shut the door," Mrs. Armour said today, "but the man thrust his foot into the opening and through this pressed a revolver into my face."

"I grasped the barrel of the weapon and thrust it over my head. I then shut the door, but he hurled himself against the door and opened it."

"I called for help, but only three servants were confronted with a revolver held by the second robber and forced into the room with me."

"One of the robbers asked where I had been, and I replied to my Lake Forest home."

"Bring all your diamonds," he asked.

"No, I left most of my jewels up there."

"I'll knock your teeth down your throat if you don't tell me where the stuff is," he commanded.

Woman Threatened With Death.

While Mrs. Armour and her maids were held in a corner of the room, with the threat of death to any who moved, one of the robbers swept the dresser of jewels; then all rooms were searched.

Completing their work, the men ran downstairs and escaped through a back door. Telephone wires had been cut to prevent alarm.

Although provided with good descriptions of the robbers, detectives had made no arrests early today.

Corps of Guards Eluded.

The Armour residence occupies half a block and is guarded by a high fence, spiked at the top. There were several male servants, housemen, chauffeurs and even a light watch-

BANK CALL IS OUT.

Government Wants to Know Condition on September 2.

Suspicion That They Are Providing Liquor for Members.

LIVE STOCK JUDGES.

Leading Experts in Lines Selected for Topeka Fair.

No Wave of Sympathy Washes His Sands of Time.

(Frank Schneck's version of famous Wilcox poem.)

"The man repented and turned from his sin
"But no door opened to let him in
"The governor prayed he might be forgiven
"But told him to look for mercy—in prison
"For this is the law of earth, I know,
"The man is stoned while the woman may go."

Frank Schneck, convicted of the murder of his wife and two children, must continue to suffer as a prisoner at the Lansing state prison. Mollie Stewart, his accomplice, is today a free woman.

At the state house there is not an official or an employee who has the slightest thought that Schneck will leave the prison—at least under the present administration. The board of corrections has not smiled on Schneck's applications for a parole and the governor's office is not in the least disposed to take an interest in the case of the Franklin county wife and child murderer.

A few days ago, however, Governor Capper sent for the two daughters of Mollie Stewart and handed them a parole for their mother. Mollie Stewart had been the subject upon whom a wave of sentiment and sympathy had been centered. Her needs were met for her more than usual attention.

She was the only woman "hang" prisoner in the state penitentiary. A chain of solid circumstances had been linked about her. A jury said she should spend her life behind prison walls or hang at the pleasure of the governor.

Verdict in Four Minutes.

The same testimony that sent Frank Schneck to prison was used in convicting Mollie Stewart. It required just four minutes for a jury to decide the case. Even the testimony of Mollie Stewart's husband, offered in a separate trial of Schneck, dropped into the state's case against the Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Witnesses who saw Schneck and the Stewart woman in each other's company. Other witnesses swore that they saw Schneck and Mrs. Stewart driving toward the Schneck home the night of the triple killing. The Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

Witnesses who saw Schneck and the Stewart woman in each other's company. Other witnesses swore that they saw Schneck and Mrs. Stewart driving toward the Schneck home the night of the triple killing. The Ottawa woman and helped to condemn her in the eyes of the jury.

MANSION HELD UP.

(Continued from Page One.)

stood face to face with a masked robber. His companion in the meantime, had overpowered three maids. "I tried to shut the door," Mrs. Armour said today, "but the man thrust his foot into the opening and through this pressed a revolver into my face."

"I grasped the barrel of the weapon and thrust it over my head. I then shut the door, but he hurled himself against the door and opened it."

"I called for help, but only three servants were confronted with a revolver held by the second robber and forced into the room with me."

"One of the robbers asked where I had been, and I replied to my Lake Forest home."

"Bring all your diamonds," he asked.

"No, I left most of my jewels up there."

"I'll knock your teeth down your throat if you don't tell me where the stuff is," he commanded.

Woman Threatened With Death.

While Mrs. Armour and her maids were held in a corner of the room, with the threat of death to any who moved, one of the robbers swept the dresser of jewels; then all rooms were searched.

Completing their work, the men ran downstairs and escaped through a back door. Telephone wires had been cut to prevent alarm.

Although provided with good descriptions of the robbers, detectives had made no arrests early today.

Corps of Guards Eluded.

The Armour residence occupies half a block and is guarded by a high fence, spiked at the top. There were several male servants, housemen, chauffeurs and even a light watch-

TODAY'S MARKET REPORT.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—WHEAT—Wheat declined today to the lowest prices for this season. Big receipts northwest and favorable weather for the movement of grain tended to depress prices. Lower quotations at Liverpool counted also against the bulls. After opening 96 1/2¢ lower to 2¢ down, the market rallied to 98 1/2¢ and then declined again.

High ocean freight rates and a still further increase in the near future are believed to be normal. The market was unsettled, 96 1/2¢ lower to 2¢ down, and then declined again.

CORN—Corn sagged with wheat and as a result of warm temperatures. Reports issued from the Illinois crop were especially bearish. Opening prices, which varied from 1/2¢ to 1¢ lower, were followed by a slight recovery.

Disappointingly small receipts and a forecast of unsettled weather gave the market a rather decided upturn. The close was firm at 96 1/2¢ to 96 3/4¢ net.

OATS—Oats proved relatively firm. A fair demand seemed to offset the fact that country receipts were a little more plentiful. The market was unsettled, 96 1/2¢ lower to 2¢ down, and then declined again.

PROVISIONS—Weakness developed in pork. Lack of export call appeared to have considerable to do with making prices incline down grade.

Chicago Grain Market.

(The range of prices for grain futures on Sept. 7, 1915, as reported by Thos. J. Myers, Broker, Columbian Bldg.)

Chicago, Sept.
	Open	High	Low	Today	Sat.
WHEAT—
Sept.	92 1/2	92 3/4	92 1/4	92 1/2	91
Dec.	90	90 1/2	89 1/2	90 1/4	90 1/4
May	93 1/4	94 1/4	93	94	94 1/4
CORN—
Sept.	70 1/2	72	70	71 1/4	70 1/4
Dec.	57	57 1/4	56 1/4	57 1/8	57 1/8
May	58 1/4	58 3/4	58	58 1/2	58 1/2